Falling River Watershed Is Shown to Group

About 75 farmers, soil conservation leaders and specialists, and other interested citizens were here yesterday for a tour of inspection of the virtually completed East Falling River Watershed project. The guests were welcomed by John C. Cole, director of the Robert E. Lee Soil District; and were briefed on the project by Frank F. Carr, Assistant State Soil Conservationist. The group came from widely scattered areas of the state, anxious to get a first-hand view of this important project. They met at the local American Legion Home, and after the briefing, made the tour in school buses. Upon the return trip they were served lunch.

The East Falling River Watershed is one of 62 Pilot Watershed Projects, authorized in 1954. It is the only Pilot Project in Virginia.

The project lies in Appomattox and Campbell Counties and consists of 67 square miles, or 42,-706 acres. There are 40 miles of paved public roads, 47 miles of graveled public roads, and 150 miles of streams. Approximately 65 per cent of the watershed is in forest cover, the balance being in crop and pasture land. There are 215 farms in the watershed, averaging 170 acres each.

The flood plain floods often, but generally only for a short duration. In the 20-year period studied, there were 158 storms that produced "out of bank" floods.

The work plan of the project included land treatment and flood retarding structures. There are a total of three such structures.

The project was set up as a five-year plan, and this is the fifth year. The major part of the work is complete. In addition to the three flood retarding structures completed, there are 18 miles of channel work, 49 miles of road-bank stabilization, 114 acres of stabilization of silt-producing areas, 1,041 acres of tree planting, 46 acres of sod waterways, 1,731 acres of contour stripcropping, 1,058 acres of pasture seeding, and 2,967 acres of pasture improvement.

This project is sponsored by the Robert E. Lee Soil Conservation District, with a large number of cooperating groups and agencies.

In her sixteenth book, Ann Bridge takes us to Portugal; not only the well-known world of Estoril and the Embassies, but behind the scenes, into the life lived on country estates by the Portuguese themselves. When Julia Probyn came to sun-lit Portugal to cover a royal wedding for her paper, the last thing she expected was to find herself involved in the escape of an important Hungarian priest, ruthless Communists who pursued him, and the affairs of a young Hungarian countess just released from behind the Iron Curtain. Abbitt To Continue Effort To Curb The Supreme Court

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va.) said this week he will ask the House Judiciary Committee to consider in January a bill he introduced last week requiring that Supreme Court decisions invalidating state laws must be unanimous.

Abbitt introduced the bill last Friday after a group of justices from 10 state Supreme Courts — nine chief justices and one associate justice— issued a sharply critical statement concerning "unrestrained policymaking" by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Virginia Congressman said he was aware that the bill had no chance of consideration at the session closing last week-end, but that he introduced it at that time because of favorable comment from various parts of the nation regarding the state justices' views. He said he prepared the bill sometime ago, for introduction in January, but introduced it in the closing days of the 85th Congress so that the matter can be considered in preparation for the opening of the 86th Congress. He plans to reintroduce the bill in January, he said.

Abbitt's bill provides that the Supreme Court may invalidate a state statute only by unanimous decision of the justices participating. He pointed out, in explaining the bill in a speech in the House, that, since 1950, 29 cases overturning state laws have been decided by a sharply divided Supreme Court. Rarely is the present court unanimous in its decisions in cases dealing with this phase of the law.

Abbitt said his purpose is to require that the Court should be in unanimous agreement before a state law can be declared unconstitutional. "I am hoping," he said, "that there may sometimes be one justice who will hold to the belief that state laws have full force and effect unless clearly in direct conflict with our Federal Constitution."

The Congressman told the House that he was "alarmed" at the great number of decisions which have been 5 - 4.

New Tobacco Referendum Is Called For September 12

The question of combining fire-cured and sun-cured tobacco allotments, where a farmer has both, will be put to a vote in a referendum to be held on Friday, September 12, the United States Department of Agriculture has announced.

The action is the result of recently enacted legislation aimed at separating more clearly fire-cured (Type 21) tobacco from Virginia sun-cured (Type 37) tobacco for purposes of marketing, according to W. T. Powers, State ASC Administrative Officer. In the past a considerable amount of Virginia sun-cured tobacco has been sold on the Blackstone, Farmville, and Lynchburg fire-cured tobacco markets. This sun-cured tobacco has characteristics so similar to fire-cured tobacco that much of the sun-cured variety reportedly has found its way into fire-cured trade channels.

Where both fire-cured and sun-cured tobacco are produced on the same farm, marketing quota regulations require that the two kinds be grown, cured, and marketed separately.

If the plan to combine fire-cured and sun-cured tobacco allotments is approved in the referendum, Powers stated that each grower having allotments for both kinds on the same farm will be given opportunity to choose which kind of allotment he wishes to have — fire-cured or sun-cured. If the farmer fails to make a choice, the ASC county committee will determine the kind of tobacco allotment that should be established for the farm. The prevalent kind of tobacco grown in the area, the curing facilities on the farm, and the nearness and nature of markets will form the basis for the committee's decision.

Any farmer is eligible to vote in the special tobacco referendum if he was engaged in the production of a 1957 crop of fire-cured tobacco or a 1957 crop of Virginia sun-cured tobacco. Also a farmer may vote if he placed his 1957 fire-cured or sun-cured tobacco allotment in the Soil Bank, the ASC Administrative Officer explained.

VEPCO INCOME SHOWS INCREASE

Additional customers and increased consumption of electricity and gas pushed operating revenues of the Virginia Electric and Power Company up 8.9 per cent for the twelve months ending July 31, according to President A. H. McDowell, Jr.

Operating revenues were up to $135,359,194 for the period ending July 31 this year compared to $124,-319,847 for the same period of last year. This increase of $11,039,347 was due to increased customers and weather conditions, McDowell said. The peak load this year has been 1,435,000 kw. as compared with a peak load of 1,333,000 kw. for the year 1957.

During the year approximately 15,000 new customers were added to the system. At present the company has 802,574 customers. Of this number, 710,641 are electric and 91,974 gas.

For the twelve month period ending July 31, Vepco's net income was up 12.8 per cent. This represents an increase of $2,913,340, up from $22,768,081 last year to $25,-681,621 this July.

Earnings on the 14,200,000 shares of common stock amounted to $1.61 this July compared to $1.41 last year. This is an increase of 20 cents or 14.2 per cent over per share earnings for the same period last year.

McDowell pointed out that to meet growing customer demands the company has spent $34,635,588 on construction during the first seven months this year.

New construction to add additional generating units is now underway at Yorktown, Portsmouth and Chesterfield Power Stations to meet system growth. A new addition at Breno Bluff Power Station was added to the system earlier this month.
